

To register with Wordpress.Com: Go to <http://wordpress.com> and select “Register”.

The screenshot shows the WordPress.com registration page titled "Get your own WordPress.com account in seconds". The "Blog Address" field is highlighted with a blue border and contains the text ".wordpress.com". A black arrow points from a text box on the right to this field. Other fields include Username, Password, Confirm, E-mail Address, and a language selection dropdown.

There is no need to set up your own blog site. To remove this text field click here

The screenshot shows the same registration page, but now the "Username" field is highlighted with a blue border. The "Blog Address" field is no longer present. The "Sign up for a blog, too" link is visible below the Username field.

Follow the on-screen directions

The screenshot shows the registration page with the Username field filled with "merrellsgadd", the Password field filled with "*****", and the E-mail Address field filled with "petermerrellsgadd@hotmail.com". The "Sign up" button is highlighted in orange. Checkmarks are visible next to the Username and E-mail Address fields, indicating they are valid.

Still waiting for your e-mail? If you haven't received your activation e-mail yet there are a number of things you can do:

- Wait a little longer. Sometimes delivery of e-mail can be delayed by processes outside of our control.
- Check the junk folder of your e-mail client. The e-mail sometimes ends up there.
- Have you entered your e-mail address correctly? We think it's petermerrellsgadd@hotmail.com but if that's wrong use the button below to fix it.

If all else fails, contact Support and we'll send you the activation e-mail again. If your e-mail is incorrect, change it using this form and click "Update e-mail." The activation e-mail will be sent to your new address.
